

Saw this and thought of your school!

BBC News School Report gives 11-14 year olds the chance to make the news for real. Students create their own video, audio and written reports and publish them on the school website, which the BBC links to.

As well as enjoying an authentic audience their work, students become BBC School Reporters during an annual News Day, which is featured on many BBC TV and radio programmes.

On 11 March 2010 - this year's news day - students around the UK will turn their classrooms into newsrooms and work to a real news deadline.

The first step is to sign up your school online at bbc.co.uk/schoolreport after which you will receive a pack of information and resources.

"I want to give young people the chance to make the news themselves, and I want to share the principles of good journalism."
