

Kylie Minogue has added an extra gig to her tour for fans that were let down when she had to stop a show halfway through because she was feeling ill. Her new extra gig has been given a date of 23rd January 2007.

The pop princess said, "Nearly all of my crew were hit by this terrible flu during the course of this tour and despite my best efforts I too succumbed last week. "I am now overjoyed to announce that I have been declared fit to return to the stage."

Two other of her shows were cancelled after doctors ordered her to rest, they have also been given new dates.

